

Resident Research Publications and Presentations

Resident participation in clinical research and scholarly activities such as scientific abstract writing, presentations at medical society meetings, and manuscript publication are integral components of our resident training program. Participation in clinical research is strongly encouraged. There are also abundant opportunities for residents to serve as sub-investigators on multi-center clinical trials that are ongoing within the Department of Neurology. The University of Florida College of Medicine- Jacksonville Dean's Office offers an internal grant competition annually for residents that is aimed at funding pilot research projects. On campus there is a biostatistics team that provides consultative and research support services to residents.
